

Mystery History

How quickly the new term rolls around and Mystery History with it.

In 2024 we are going to look at a trail of escapologists from one of the grand old buildings in England - a fortress deep and mighty, as one might say (with thanks to Simon and Garfunkel). A mysterious disappearance will make its appearance on Mystery History (punning on the name) and where would the term be if we didn't dip into our story of evolution?

More to come from Roman history too - when does a mother move from doting to over the top? Let's look and see if any of us fit the mould. Another week will take us on a journey into more recent history - the 20th century (yes, I know it's not what you expect from me) and then another famous person also from recent history.

We will look at a group of people who are often misunderstood and finally a potpourri of smaller topics not long enough to have their own sessions.

All in all, I think we are going to cover a lot of subjects totally unrelated to each other as we dart through time and around the world, so why not join us on a Tuesday morning in the clubrooms?
